GENERAL BOOTH'S TOUR.

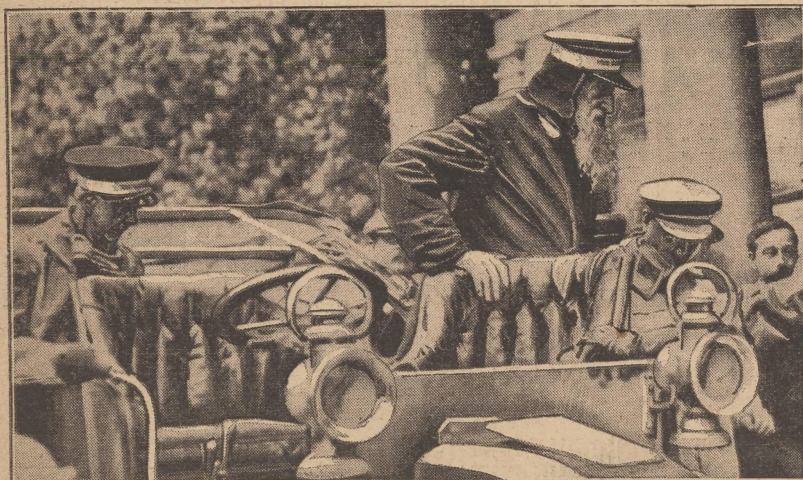

General Booth had a splendid reception at Folkestone, where the photograph reproduced was taken as he was addressing the crowd assembled to greet him. The mayor and town councillors formally welcomed the aged commander of the Salvation Army.

TO-DAY'S FASHIONABLE WEDDING.

Miss Gwladys Wilson, daughter of Mr. C. H. Wilson, M.P., and one of the "beautiful Wilson girls," who is to be married to-day to—

Snapshot of General Booth as he was leaving his motor-car at Folkestone. He did not arrive until much after the advertised time, owing to a slight mishap to his car on the way. At the meeting the General spoke huskily, as he always does after a sea voyage, but with all his accustomed power.

—Mr. Eric Chaplin, son of the Right Hon. Henry Chaplin, M.P., at Warter Church, Yorkshire. The bride will be attended by the youngest page on record—Lord Stewart, who is only two years old.—(Langfieri.)

SLENDER HOPE OF PEACE.

M. Witte Reported To Be Very Far From Sanguine.

PRESIDENT'S DOUBTS.

Suggestion That Japanese Demands
May Prove Intolerable.

On Saturday the fateful meeting of plenipotentiaries representing Russia and Japan takes place at New York. The whole world is looking to the result.

A note of pessimism has sounded with increasing volume during the last few days, and M. Witte is represented to have said, just before his arrival yesterday on American soil, that he feared the Japanese demands would be intolerable, and that the negotiations would be broken off within a week.

On the other hand, the M.P. who represents the Daily Mirror in the Lobby, says that in Parliamentary circles M. Witte's alleged pessimistic views are regarded with considerable doubt, and in his opinion there is every reason to absolutely discount the report as published.

"Everything I have heard," he adds, "confirms the view I expressed some days ago, that even at the risk of his own personal reputation in Russia, and even with the possibility of making himself unpopular with the Tsar, the Russian diplomatist intends to exert every possible influence to bring about a settlement of the war, provided, of course, it can be done with honour to his country."

"Of the immediate urgency of peace, no one is more convinced than the Russian ex-Finance Minister."

But the Russian Press continues to reflect growing anti-peace sentiment, on the assumption that the Japanese conditions will not be consonant with Russia's honour.

M. WITTE PESSIMISTIC.

Thinks the Negotiations Will Probably End
Within a Week.

New York, Wednesday.—The liner Kaiser Wilhelm, with M. Witte, the Russian peace plenipotentiary, on board, was signalled at Nantucket at midnight.

A wireless dispatch from the Kaiser Wilhelm, via Siasconset, says that M. Witte had a good passage, and is in perfect health.

The Russian statesman is reported to have said: "It has been stated that I am to feel the way with a view to floating a Russian loan in America, and to discuss the commercial relations between the two countries. My only mission is to take part in the peace negotiations, but I am quite willing to express my personal opinion on questions affecting Russo-American relations with a view to strengthening the traditional friendship between the two countries."

The "New York Herald's" correspondent on the steamer sends the following message by wireless telegraphy:—

M. Witte says he is afraid the negotiations will end within a week, as the Japanese conditions will be so intolerable as not to admit of discussion.

The "Herald" also states that a somewhat pessimistic feeling prevails in diplomatic circles here, owing to reports from Oyster Bay to the effect that while President Roosevelt is still hopeful, he is in considerable doubt as to the outcome of the negotiations.—Reuter.

PLENIPOTENTIARIES THREATENED.

New York, Wednesday.—Threatening letters have caused the authorities to keep secret the means by which the plenipotentiaries will be conveyed from their hotel to the Navy Yard, where they are to meet.—Laffan.

HOOLIGANS RUN RIOT.

Well-Dressed Promenaders at Kishineff
Chased and Beaten with Sticks.

Telegrams from Kishineff received in St. Petersburg yesterday state that on Monday bands of roughs made assaults on the better classes, who, to the number of several thousands, were promenading in the gardens.

The assailants, who were armed for the most part with sticks, beat, pursued, and hustled the crowds, who fled in panic. Many were seriously injured. Similar scenes of violence were, says Reuter, witnessed in the evening.

SCHOOL OF "FLAT LIFE."

Citizens To Be Adapted In Youth to Modern Housekeeping Needs.

"CONDENSED" EXISTENCE.

Schoolchildren in Chicago during their holidays are offered special instruction on how to live in flats.

To the majority of mankind the flat is a novelty, and to those who do not understand it, a place of torture. The new school is to teach how to make the most of next to nothing.

For instance, it will teach how to get a bed, a wardrobe, a washstand, and several other articles of furniture into a bedroom measuring six by six, and then how to dress and undress in it—at least, it will if it is going to solve the great problem of flat life.

Then, too, the school will tackle the problem of how to keep a proper temperature in a flat. At present a flat is either like an oven or a refrigerator. There should be a happy mean.

"The management of the life man" will probably have a special course of lectures. At present the only means known is that of the frequent tip. Modern science should find something better than that.

Man is an adaptable animal, but the adaptation takes time. The chief result of the process of adaptation is at present incompatibility of temper. The school will hurry up the process, and in time man will come to find flat life even enjoyable and almost natural.

$600,000 LOSSES.

Paris Panic Alayed by the Statement That
M. Jaluzot Has Arranged with Creditors.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Wednesday.—The panic caused by M. Jaluzot's sensational failure for $600,000 has been allayed by the announcement that he has come to a satisfactory arrangement with his creditors.

The events of the last few days have set every one telling again the strange stories of his early days.

His good looks gave him his start in life, for, when employed in one of the greatest drapery establishments here, he attracted the favourable attention of the proprietress, who married him.

When the premises were burnt down he was severely attacked by Parisians in regard to certain incidents, but he righted himself by persuading the Cardinal-Archbishop of Paris to pronounce benediction on the new buildings, which yielded him $600,000 a year. The incident was used by Zola in "Au Bonheur des Dames." He is chiefly known, however, as a great newspaper proprietor.

SINGER'S SORE STRAITS.

Sang for £20 a Night, but Seeks Charity
In His Old Age.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Wednesday.—Paulus, formerly a popular and celebrated music-hall singer, who used to sing, amongst other places, at the London Pavilion for £20 a night, is in a state of dire distress.

He is over sixty and wants to get into a home for actors.

He made a large sum by composing a popular song at the time of the Boulanger affair, but lost it all.

BATTLE PHOTOGRAPHS.

How Mr. Harry de Windt Cinematographed
Turco-Bulgarian Conflicts.

Touring through Macedonia and Bulgaria in search of cinematograph pictures led Mr. Harry de Windt, who has just reached home again, into some strange experiences.

"It nearly broke poor Mr. de Windt's heart," said Mr. Urban, of the Charles Urban Trading Company, "to get the Bulgarians and Macedonians to look animated when the camera came along."

"They sat or stood, stolidly gazing at the instrument. But they scrambled fast enough when he flung a bundle of pictures among them."

"Mr. de Windt secured magnificent pictures of a skirmish between Bulgarians and Turks."

"To-day, by the way, Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. de Windt's colleague, goes to Scarborough to get animated photographs of divers at work on the pier wreckage. He will have to go down into the sea in diving costume and place his camera in a waterproof box."

"It is the first attempt of the kind ever made."

QUEEN AND CLOWN.

Her Majesty Rewards Goodwood Performer with a Gold Coin.

There was a charming little interlude in yesterday's brilliant proceedings at Goodwood, which were graced by the presence of the King and Queen.

Soon after the Goodwood Plate, Her Majesty, leaving the terrace on the pavilion near the lawn, took great interest in the antics of a clown, who was performing close by.

The performer evidently amused the Queen, for she laughed heartily at his drolleries, and, beckoning to an equerry, handed him a gold coin to give to the delighted clown.

The incident did not escape notice. Immediately a large and fashionably-dressed crowd assembled round the man, who had been so unexpectedly marked out for royal favour, and loud cheers were raised for her Majesty.

The most perfect of summer weather again favoured the great race meeting. Never have the stately trees, the gold glades, and the princely racetrack, on the Duke of Richmond's great estate looked better.

Their Majesties drove up to the course half an hour before the first race, her Majesty wearing her favourite toilette of creamy white and mauve.

The Queen, as well as the King, took the greatest interest in the sport, which was of a peculiarly attractive character. There was, of course, a large assembly, and the scene, bright with myriads of charming costumes, was one of dazzling colour, to which the sunlit and fertile country-side lent a most effective background.

Her Majesty greatly appreciated the new stand which the Duke of Richmond had erected for her exclusive use.

Special prizes were given by the King and Queen for the best-kept cottage and the best-stocked garden on the Sandringham estate at the show held there yesterday.

ROYAL CHRISTENING.

Prince Charles of Wales To Receive His Baptismal Name at Sandringham To-Day.

Sandringham village has only one topic of conversation to-day—the christening of the infant son of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

There has been no royal function at Sandringham since Prince Henry of Wales was christened there in April, 1900, for Prince George, who was the first royal baby to be born during the King's reign, was baptised at Windsor, with impressive ceremonial, in St. George's Chapel.

To-day's christening will be a simple function, taking place at three o'clock at Sandringham Church. The Prince and Princess of Wales and their children, and Princess Victoria, who acts as sponsor, will be present.

VOGUE OF THE SANDAL.

The Light and Airy Footwear of Ancient Times Becoming Fashionable Again.

Is the sandal really coming into general favour? It seems so. Mr. Keir Hardie has set the fashion, and men are now seen walking along the Strand with bare, sandalled feet.

A fashionable bootmaker informed the Daily Mirror that he was every day receiving numerous orders for the light and airy footwear of the Greeks.

Holiday-makers affect them most at present, but they may soon come into common use.

Being worn without stockings they allow of a much freer circulation of the blood than tight-laced boots. For this reason they are an admirable cure for such ailments as rheumatism.

KING'S HOST ENGAGED.

I hear that the Duke of Richmond, who is the host of their Majesties this week, is, says "Vanity Fair," engaged to Evelyn Lady Alington, widow of the late Lord Alington.

The Duke has already been twice married, first to Maria Riccardo, and secondly to Miss Craven, who died in 1887.

MR. CARNEGIE'S RETORT.

New York, Wednesday.—Mr. Andrew Carnegie has refused aid towards the building of a concert-hall in McKeesport because some years ago when he gave over $7,000 towards a library in the town there was much opposition. The public failed to support the library, which is now a financial wreck.—Laffan.

KING ALFONSO IN A STORM.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Wednesday.—King Alfonso arrived here this afternoon on board the Giralda. The royal yacht was caught in a storm on the high seas.—Reuter.

COUNT TO THE RESCUE.

Son of Prince Hohenlohe Dives To Save a Servant.

GALLANTRY IN VAIN.

Lieutenant-Colonel Count Gleichen, who so distinguished himself in the South African war, made a gallant attempt to save one of the Princess of Hohenlohe-Langenburg's servants from drowning yesterday.

The Princess Hohenlohe has recently taken Overstone House, in Northamptonshire, from Lady Wansage, and three of her servants went to bathe in the lake there.

The butler and two footmen rowed out on the lake in a boat, from which they dived. Atkinson, the butler, was holding on to the boat when, from some unexplained cause, it turned over, and the man sank to the bottom.

The alarm was at once given, and Count Gleichen ran down to the lake. Being shown where the unfortunate man had sunk he immediately dived in.

Failing to find the man at the first attempt he dived again and again, but the water is very deep at this spot, and in spite of the Count's efforts, which were continued until he was exhausted, he failed to find the man's body.

The butler, Atkinson, was thirty years of age, and he had been in the service of the Prince and Princess Christian.

Lieutenant-Colonel Count Gleichen, C.M.G., D.S.O., C.V.O., is forty-two years of age, being the only son of the late Admiral Prince Victor of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, who organically married Miss Laura Seymour, sister of the fifth Marquis of Hertford.

He has served in the Sudan and in South Africa, where, at Modder River, he was wounded.

He has written several books, including "With the Mission to Menck," the result of his journey to that monarch's Court with Mr. Rennell Rodd.

BETTER POOR-LAWS.

Government To Deal with the Problem After Seventy Years.

For upwards of seventy years the Poor-Laws of this country have practically remained unchanged.

But the Government thinks the time has come for surveying the new condition of things that have arisen.

Mr. Balfour made this admission in the House of Commons yesterday when, in reply to Mr. Wilmore, he said the Government would consider the advisability of appointing a Royal Commission at an early date.

No inquiry, he said, had taken place since the early 'thirties. The general scope of the inquiry would include the examination of those who were poor by their own fault or temporary lapse of employment.

VETERANS ALL.

Remarkable Centenary Fete in which Twenty Men Over 80 Will Take Part.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Wednesday.—A centenary anniversary of a somewhat remarkable character will take place on August 20 in the little town of Vaux, near Chalons.

Accompanied to the church by his wife, aged ninety-eight, a farmer named Farrios will celebrate his hundredth birthday. He will be escorted by a guard of honour of twenty men, all over eighty years of age.

MIDNIGHT TELEGRAMS.

Great damage has been caused in the Spanish town of Salamanca by a hurricane and water-spout.

An unemployed demonstration is to be held to-day at Manchester in the yard of one of the city police stations.

Judgment was reserved until next Wednesday at yesterday's resumed hearing of the MacBride divorce case in Paris.

It is reported from Kangra, says a Lahore telegram, that an immense lake, two or three miles long, has been formed by a hill-slide which blocked a tributary of the Beas River after the earthquake in April. The valley below is threatened with destruction.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Our special weather forecast for to-day is: Westwesterly breezes; fair and cool to cloudy, with local showers.
Lightning—up to time, 8.44 p.m.
Sea passages will be moderate generally.

BANK HOLIDAY TRIPS ABROAD.

How to See Foreign Countries in a Few Days.

CHEAP MOTOR TOURS.

To-day is quite one of the most important days of the year. To-day you must make up your mind where you are going for your August Bank Holiday, for to-morrow you will be busy packing.

The Daily Mirror has already told of the many places at which the holidays may be spent in the British Isles, and to-day it adds information about several foreign places that can be reached without any very serious expenditure in time and money.

By arrangement with Messrs. Cook, of tourist fame, you can travel to Paris and back in three days for under £3 and get two days' hotel accommodation in the French capital, and drives all round it into the bargain. The L.B. and S.C.R. will carry you there and back for a mere 26s., and allow you to return any time within fourteen days.

Sixteen shillings is all you need pay the same company for a run over to Dieppe, starting on Friday, Saturday, Sunday, or Monday, and returning on Wednesday.

To the Field of Waterloo.

For five guineas Messrs. Cook will take you to Lucerne and back and give you six days' accommodation over that. Geneva can be reached for the same amount. Two days at Boulogne will cost you a mere £1 10s. For £3 10s. you can visit Brussels and the famous battlefield of Waterloo, returning at any time within eight days.

Should you have more time and money at your disposal and wish to avoid the actual Bank Holiday rush, you can, by arrangement with Cook's, sail round Great Britain in a splendid 1,000-ton steamer leaving Gravesend on August 7 and returning August 31. The trip will cost you 11 guineas. For an increased expenditure of another guinea Norway is within your reach.

Eight pounds will give you a week's tour on the glorious Rhine, with visits to Cologne, Coblenz, Wiesbaden, etc. Even mysterious Russia is available. By the Wilson Line steamers it is possible to get to St. Petersburg and back within a fortnight at a very moderate charge.

Should you be unable to get away for more than the actual Bank Holiday itself there are still several ways in which you can get change of air and scene.

Holiday Motor Tours.

For about five guineas you can hire a first-class powerful motor-car and a man to drive it, and travel 150 or 200 miles easily within the day. The London Motor Garage will accommodate you.

Then there are the daily sailings of the New Palace steamers from London to Southend, Margate, Ramsgate, Deal, and Dover, allowing from one to five hours at each place before returning, and to Southend, Clacton, Walton, Harwich, Ipswich, Felixstowe, Southwold, Lowestoft, and Yarmouth by the Belle steamers.

Mr. Hugh Clements prophesies for London a practical absence of rain on the Bank Holiday. His special forecast is: "Unsettled weather in the morning and between two and three o'clock in the afternoon, with sunshine not exceeding four hours. In the north of Ireland, of England, and the south of Scotland it will be unsettled, with rain, but there will be a gradual improvement proceeding southward; and on the South Coast finer weather and more sunshine will prevail."

"SUMMER GIRL" IN FARCE.

County Court Judge's Play Produced Last Night at Wyndham's.

To see the "Summer Girl," so hotly discussed in our columns, on the stage, you have only to go to Wyndham's Theatre.

"What the Butler Stole" by Judge Parry and Mr. F. Monilloit, shows how a young man flirted with a number of young women at a "Hydro," and was unpleasantly surprised by the arrival of his wife.

She has to pretend to be someone, and there are a great many doors, and everybody chooses the wrong one, and— you can imagine the rest! It is a typical August entertainment, which may serve to amuse country cousins. Mr. Grahame Brown is the "star"; Mr. Rigby makes Buttons at the "Hydro" comical enough. Mrs. Monilloit plays the wife.

At the New Theatre "Leah Kleschna" passed its one hundredth performance last night. It well deserves its popularity.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN AND SAILORS.

Replying to a correspondent who had written respecting the number of aliens employed on British ships, Mr. Chamberlain said the presence in such large numbers is a danger and an injustice.

TO NEW YORK IN 3 DAYS.

Electric Ship Which Will Travel 40
Knots an Hour.

If an invention which was shown at Earl's Court yesterday does all that is claimed for it, it will soon be possible to cross the Atlantic in three days.

Forty knots an hour is the speed claimed for a new electrically-propelled boat. Instead of a single or double screw of the ordinary type, this vessel has sixteen screw propellers arranged along the sides and at the stern.

Mr. W. Rowe, the inventor's agent, told the Daily Mirror yesterday that Bills are now before the United States Legislature to vote the cost of a cruiser and a destroyer to be built on this principle, which is the patent of a Mr. R. B. Painter.

"Enough fuel," said Mr. Rowe, "can be carried to enable the vessel to cross from Southampton to New York and back within a week."

"The propellers are operated by motors connected by wires with the generating dynamos, and each motor being independent, a total breakdown is impossible."

"In this type of vessel there is more space, by 30 per cent., for passengers and cargo than in the ordinary steamship."

ADMIRALTY BLAMED.

Committee "Strongly Condemns" £160,000
Being Spent on Ships About To Be Sold.

"Your committee cannot too strongly condemn so extravagant a policy." "Your committee are of opinion that the Admiralty were mistaken."

These phrases, taken from the fourth report of the Committee of Public Accounts, which was issued yesterday, show how strongly the committee disapproves of recent acts of the Admiralty.

The report points out that the aerial cableway made at Cape Town cost £7,950, although the estimate was £4,000.

In 1902-3 and 1903-4 payments of £59,000 and £494,000 were made to contractors in anticipation of the signing of contracts.

Work at Chatham Dockyard estimated to cost £50,000 cost £70,000, and the Admiralty approved this without the sanction of the Treasury, while £100,000 was spent upon the repairs of vessels about to be sold out of the Navy. Both these transactions are adversely commented upon by the committee.

OMINOUS COMPARISON.

General Buller's Gloomy View of the State of Our Army.

In connection with Earl Roberts's suggestion that compulsory military training must be adopted in England a letter from General Buller to Mr. Hales, of Leicester, is of particular interest.

General Buller, it may be noted, is a firm believer in the Volunteers, but he takes as gloomy a view of the state of our Army as Lord Roberts.

He writes:—"Instead of looking after and encouraging and improving what they had, our statesmen have disorganised the Army, discouraged the Militia, and disheartened the Volunteers. They have produced a state of affairs which is worse from a defence point of view than before the war."

FARMERS ATTACK TROOPS.

Irishmen Armed with Bludgeons and Scythes
Assail Squad of Artillerymen.

A regular battle between a large number of farmers, aided by their servants, and a squad of the Royal Garrison Artillery is reported from Innishowen, on the shores of Lough Swilly.

The body of farmers, armed with bludgeons and scythes, made a sudden attack on the artillerymen. The latter defended themselves as best they could, but the onslaught was so unexpected and desperate that several of them were seriously injured.

The condition of one gunner, named King, is so serious that his depositions have been taken in hospital.

The farmers are said to have complained that their crops were devastated by the military manoeuvres. It is known that the district in which the Irish gold mine is located was recently placarded with bills decrying the British Army.

GUARD FALLS OUT OF HIS TRAIN.

"That guard is leaning out rather a long way," said a passenger on a South-Eastern train passing Southwark Bridge.

The speaker then heard a click, and the guard's van was empty at the next station. The guard, James Charles Hale, was found lying by the railway line dead.

The falling off in the import of German barrel-organs is compensated by a corresponding briskness at Saffron-hill.

ENTENTE CORDIALE.

Portsmouth To Give the French
Fleet a Royal Welcome.

GRAVE "PROBLEMS."

Portsmouth is gradually working itself up into a state of excitement over the visit of the French fleet.

The town could never make itself look French, but at the present moment it would if it could.

The two great questions which every inhabitant of Portsmouth is asking are, first, "Do you speak French?" and, second, "What about drink?"

No one can decide what is the proper form of liquid refreshment to offer the French sailor. Does he drink wine, beer, or spirits?

The average British blue-jacket can be trusted to appreciate beer, and not to sneer at anything else of a like nature, but French tastes are supposed to be different.

There is a firm belief, and a consequent feeling of unrest, that he will want to drink an unpleasant sour drink known as "vin ordinaire," and no one has any clear idea of what that may be.

Hospitality enjoins that the host shall drink what his guest does. Hence the nervousness.

Store of Absinthe.

And absinthe, too! Those who cater for the needs of the sailorman on shore have laid in lavish stores. No one has any idea as to how to drink it, though its potency is said to have been discovered already by some of the inhabitants of "Pompey"—as the sailorman lovingly calls Portsmouth.

Another sign of the times is the extraordinary crop of colic bearing the legend "Ici on parle français," which has sprung up in the shop windows. It is suggested that someone there are hardly accurate, or we are a greater nation of linguists than we imagined.

Lucky it is for Portsmouth, too, that the French national flag is but stripes of red, white, and blue. If it had been anything complicated, decorations would be a more difficult matter than they are. Red, white, and blue has always played an important part in our own national decorations, and so many people were partly provided.

Still, there has been an enormous run on the flag-makers, who have risen nobly to the occasion—not to mention the profits—and there are few buildings which cannot boast a French flag as well as a Union Jack.

A Timely Warning.

The temptation to hang our neighbour's flag upside down seems to be almost irresistible. Let it be noted once and for all that the blue should be next to the flagstaff.

Arrangements are being made to take the French officers and men for motor-car rides about the country, so as to show them as much as possible in the time.

Intending spectators may be assured that there is really not the least chance of mistaking a French battleship or cruiser for an English vessel. The French warships, for the time being, all stand much higher out of the water than ours.

The French funnels are given a strange appearance by being in many cases surmounted with hoods, and all the ships are painted a brilliant black.

To-day the first cruiser squadron arrives, and will be followed on Saturday by the Channel Fleet. The King also arrives on Saturday, and on Monday our visitors will anchor in British waters.

HINT TO NON-LINGUISTS.

The general practice of the average Englishman in talking to a Frenchman is to use nursery English of the purest Saxon derivation and to speak very loudly.

The right way is to "use long words"; that is, words of Latin origin which the Frenchman understands most readily.

ENERGETIC ROOSEVELTS.

Busy Life of Daughter of the Bustling
American President.

Genius is said to be the one thing that a great man cannot leave to his descendants.

But Miss Alice Roosevelt, who is just now seeing Japan with determined thoroughness, has certainly inherited her father's energy. An American statistician has calculated her achievements for the last fifteen months.

Seventeen hundred calls and 680 afternoon teas were her lighter forms of amusement. Attendance at 400 dinners, 350 balls, and 300 small dances formed part of her other duties, which also included 32,000 long and hearty handshakes.

BOOKS STOLEN FROM ST. STEPHEN'S.

No fewer than eight volumes of books have been taken from the library of the House of Commons. The works taken were temporarily placed in the library on the suggestion of a special committee appointed at the instance of Mr. Speaker Gully.

PHENOMENAL SWIM.

Miss Kellerman Breaks the Record from Ramsgate to Margate.

Yesterday Miss Kellerman swam the twelve miles from Ramsgate to Margate.

It was "the Mermaid's" hardest day's work she has yet attempted. All the wisecracks among the fishermen at Deal and Ramsgate solemnly shook their heads and urged her skipper against attempting so arduous a task.

There all the currents and tides from the North Sea and the Channel meet, and, declared these Solomons, there was no swimmer alive that could breast them.

But the nineteen-year-old Australian girl, who is going to attempt to swim the Channel for the Daily Mirror trophy, was not to be daunted. "I'm going to try," she declared, and no amount of persuasion or argument could alter that decision.

So at eleven o'clock, with thousands of cheering holiday-makers watching, Miss Kellerman dived from the steps of a bathing-machine on Ramsgate beach. A strong wind was blowing in shore, and nasty choppy waves were splashing in the swimmer's face.

Steadily she swam on with that strong stroke of hers, laughing at the spray, which nearly blinded her and rimmed her eyes with glistening salt.

North Foreland opened up presently, and the skipper gave the word to swim seawards. The tussle was coming now, and the little girl would need all her strength.

"Grub," called her father across the waves, and with a little shriek of joy she came with racing stroke to the boat. She took her Cadbury's cocoa and bread and called for more.

Then came the struggle. To sea went the girl swimmer and the tossing little boat. Just opposite, where Cliftonville and Margate join, the skipper gave a stern command, "Come in the boat," he yelled; "you've done well; you can do no more. It would take hours to make the pier."

No other swimmer, though many have failed in the attempt, has ever accompanied what Miss Kellerman did without the slightest effort.

AN AMUSING "SKIT."

Satirical Comment on the Present Zeal for Swimming the Channel.

According to a satirical writer in the "Bystander," there will be some strange doings this month along the southern shores of England.

Swimming the Channel will become more fashionable than motor-car travel. At the next wedding at Folkestone the bride and bridegroom, in swimming attire, will be driven down to the beach to spend their honeymoon in swimming across to France.

A Channel Swimmers' Club will be inaugurated next week, the humorist continues, the test of admission to consist in the ability to swim two lengths of the Paddington Baths!

This will lead to the overcrowding of the Channel. The "water-bugs," voyaging in motor-boats and turbines, will have to be restrained by law from indulging in reckless racing at the expense of the thousands of humble swimmers covering the sea between France and England!

BOY SMOKERS.

Colonies in Advance of England in the Fight Against a Recognised Evil.

"Cigarette smoking among children," said a magistrate yesterday when remanding a boy accused of theft from a tobacconist's shop, "is one of the greatest evils of the day."

But though protests are being made from Bench and public platform practically every day, no measure to deal with juvenile smoking has yet been passed into law. All the Colonies now enforce rigid prohibitions against the sale of tobacco to young boys, and only a day or two ago the first conviction under a new Act at the Cape was reported, a trader having been fined £4 for selling cigarettes to a boy under sixteen.

With the object of introducing similar legislation in England, Dr. Macnamara, M.P., is actively pressing forward a Bill to deal with the subject.

DESCENDANT OF PRINCE RUPERT.

Alderman Sir Henry Bromley, fifth baronet, of Stoke Hall, Newark, a descendant of Prince Rupert, has bequeathed the painting of Rupert, his ancestors, and his collection of stamps to devolve as heirlooms with the Stoke Hall estates—the picture only so long as the life tenant is his lineal descendant.

KING'S GIFT OF A MOTOR-CAR.

King Edward has seen and approved the new motor-car for eight persons which has been specially constructed for use at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the royal palace given by his Majesty as a convalescent home for officers of the Services.

BOGUS HOME WORK AGENCIES.

Enormous Number of Applicants
Declare They Have Been Duped.

INGENIOUS SCHEME.

An advertisement offering "remunerative home employment" figured in a remarkable case at Teddington yesterday, when Thomas Paynter, of Southall, and Eva Johnson, of the Shanty, Teddington, were charged with obtaining money by false pretences.

The Treasury, prosecuting, alleged that Paynter was connected with various employment agencies, among which were the following:—

North and Co., Teddington.
Thomas and Co., Twickenham.
T. Smith and Co., Southall.
These "companies" offered £1 a week for addressing envelopes at home.

But this, it was alleged, was merely a ruse to dispose of cheap stylographic pens and stationery at a large profit.

A witness from East Ham stated that she sent 3s. in reply to "North and Co.'s" advertisement, and received a stylographic pen, twenty-five envelopes, and a list of addresses.

Messrs. George Shand and Co., pen manufacturers, stated that they knew Paynter, as "T. Smith and Co." He had bought from them, since last October, 4,870 worth of pens at 31s. 6d. per gross, packed in boxes and labelled two shillings each.

Miss Doris Hawksworth, a clerk employed by "North and Co.," at a salary of five shillings a week, stated that when the packets of addressed envelopes were returned from the firm's home employees they were destroyed!

Introductions Paid For.

These people were all asked to send the name of at least one friend, for which they received one shilling. Only sixpence was sent to those who failed to forward another name. In cases of dispute the 3s. was returned, on condition that the pen and envelopes were sent back.

One of "North and Co.'s" customers was a kitchenmaid from Berkeley-square.

It appeared that an enormous number of applications for employment were received by "North and Co." from all sorts of people, but that, for the most part at any rate, the envelope-addressing was merely a ruse.

Mr. Johnson who rented "The Shanty" at Teddington was accorded a seat in court. She was smartly-attired, and wore heavy gold earrings.

MILLIONS OF PASSENGERS.

Underground Railways Have Carried a Number Equal to the Whole Earth's Population.

"We (the Metropolitan and District Railway) are now carrying at the rate of 70,000,000 passengers a year, and have reasonable expectations of increasing that number to 100,000,000."

Mr. R. W. Perks, M.P., made this statement at yesterday's half-yearly meeting of the company.

"Since the company commenced running," he remarked, "we have carried a number of passengers equal to the entire population of the earth. That ought to entitle us to some consideration on the part of those who so freely criticise us."

During the half year the number of passengers exceeded by 400,000 the total for any previous like period, but, whilst their first-class patrons had increased 11 per cent., they had lost 207,000 in the second-class.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

Miss Fannie Eden achieved a great success with her new story-paper last week. There was a very big demand for No. 1 of "Fannie Eden's Penny Stories," and those who read the first number will want No. 2, which will be on sale next Saturday.

The story is specially suitable for the holiday season, and you will find "Fannie Eden's Penny Stories" a splendid companion for the beach or the countryside. Miss Fannie Eden hopes that No. 2 will be even more widely welcomed than No. 1.

ONCE A FRIEND OF CHARLES DICKENS.

Edward Newman, for forty years head verger of Rochester Cathedral, was one of those quaint old-world characters that delighted Dickens.

The great novelist used often to walk over from Gadshill to enjoy a talk with the verger, who was buried yesterday in the ancient cathedral of which he knew every nook and stone.

At a meeting of the Consolidated Kent Collieries Corporation held in Winchester House yesterday, a confirmatory resolution for the winding-up of the company was passed.

DROWNED IN A TUB.

Mother Kills Her Children While Her Husband Is Out Seeking Work.

In their home in Courtenay-place, Walthamstow, two little girls, Elsie and Katie Collinson, lost their lives yesterday.

They were drowned by their mother, Louisa Sarah Collinson, while their father was out looking for work to get them food.

Elsie and Katie were only nine and eight years old. They were their father's youngest children. There were four others in the family, the three eldest being by Mr. Collinson's first wife.

When Mrs. Collinson had taken the lives of her little ones, she rushed out of the house, and gave herself up to the police, crying, "I have drowned my two children."

Elsie and Katie were then found by a constable lying dead in a tub of water in a room upstairs.

Their father had been out of work for some time. Before this loss of work happened he had been employed at one place in the City for eighteen years.

It is supposed that the poverty that had suddenly come on the family unhinged the unhappy mother's mind.

To a neighbour the previous evening she had said: "We have nothing. Something must be done."

She will be charged at Stratford Police Court to-day.

CHARITY NOT EXEMPT.

Judges Hold That a Free Shelter Is, in Law,
a Common Lodging-House.

Father Gilbert, who carries on a night refuge known as the Dormitory, at Crispin-street, Stepney, appealed to the King's Bench Division against the decision of Mr. Cluer.

His Worship held that the house was a common lodging-house, and was liable to inspection.

In the first decided case on the subject it was held that the mere fact that no profit was made on the sums charged did not take Salvation Army shelters out of the Act, and it was sought to distinguish this case, because Father Gilbert did not make any charge.—Appeal dismissed.

PERJURED CONVICT.

Plaintiff in a Civil Action Arrested for Denying a Past Conviction.

Arising out of a county court case a charge of perjury was preferred at Westminster Police Court yesterday against George Rolfe, a Chelsea painter.

Rolfe, said counsel, recently secured £40 damages in the Brompton County Court against George Fox Hamilton, landlord of a Chelsea public-house, where Rolfe sustained injuries through falling down a staircase.

Rolfe during that case stated that he had not been convicted of a felonious offence, but when arrested on the present charge he said: "I know I've been convicted, but I think it is a shame a man's convictions should be brought against him in a case like this." He was remanded.

CRIPPLE'S £5 A DAY.

Mendicant with Wooden Arms and No Legs
Imprisoned for Assault.

With wooden arms and no legs, Percy Barry, a twenty-five-year-old organ-grinder, of Kentish Town, presented a strange figure as he was carried into the Marylebone Police Court yesterday.

Still more strange was the fact that he was there to answer three charges—drunkenness, use of obscene language, and assault on the police.

Police-constable Welch said Barry was creating a disturbance in Malden-road, Kentish Town, and when attempts were made to remove him, he thrust his wooden arms between the spokes of the organ.

When being carried to the station by Police-constable Horn, he struck that officer with his wooden arm.

Seven previous convictions were proved against Barry, who, it is said, could collect 2s. or 2s. 6d. a day by reason of his affliction. Sentence of six weeks' imprisonment in the second division was passed.

FRIENDLY FOES.

"We had a bit of a fight; I went to lead off at him, and I slipped." Thus Michael Driscoll pleaded yesterday, at the Tower Bridge Police Court, for William Fairman, who was charged with breaking Driscoll's leg.

But, though his old enemy tried to shield him, Fairman was condemned to one month's imprisonment.

FISHER-GIRLS AMAZED.

Scotch Lassies Think the House of Lords Is "a Gran' Place."

A crowd of braw Scotch fisher-lassies invaded the Houses of Parliament yesterday.

They have come from Peterhead, north of Aberdeen, to the Earl's Court Exhibition, where they weave and repair nets, and knit socks. They were taken over the House of Lords by Lord Aberdeen.

"This 'a gran' place, is Parliament, an' jist like the pictures," said one yesterday.

"We ken little of London. We came straight fra Peterhead, and when the exhibition is over we shall gang straight hame again."

"The Laird Aberdeen took some of us 'ot yesterday; and he has promised to come for the rest of us to-morrow."

These Scotch girls have lost none of their native simplicity in the few weeks they have been in London, and the broadness of their Scotch may be judged from the fact that on their arrival at the exhibition a few weeks ago they were quite unable to make themselves understood.

When they reached the exhibition gates a messenger was dispatched to the manager with the request to come and see "a foreign party."

PENCILLED FAREWELL.

Wife Informs Her Husband She Is "Above
Being a Convenience," and Leaves Him.

The letter of a wife who is said to have eloped was read at the West Ham Police Court yesterday, when Emily Jessie Thompson and Joseph Langham, both giving the same address, were remanded on a charge of stealing household goods, the property of Mrs. Thompson's husband.

Thompson, who lives at Canning Town, said when he returned home from Oxford, where he had been on business, he found his wife and his younger child were missing and his elder child had been left with his grandparents.

There was a pencilled note from the wife, in which she said:—"You will see by this I have left here. You never want me or my company and I'm rather above being a convenience."

"You need not trouble to look for me. I am as I am dead to you."

The wife in court contended that the goods were her own property, and the man, Langham, interjected the remark:—"I gave special directions that nothing should be taken that was his (Mr. Thompson's)."

£5 NOTES GIVEN AWAY.

Great Opportunity For Readers of "Answers" at the Seaside.

This week readers of "Answers" who happen to be on their holidays are afforded a novel opportunity of paying their expenses.

"Mr. Answers" is probably as well known as the paper he has been associated with for so many years. He has been through almost every conceivable adventure, but this week he is giving away bank-notes at seaside resorts. To-day "Mr. Answers" visits Southend, and he will look for a man or woman carrying a copy of "Answers" on the beach. To the first one he meets complying with these conditions he will hand a letter from the editor entitling the recipient to the sum of £5.

What people have to do who would like their holiday expenses paid for them is therefore this—carry a copy of "Answers" on the beach. Further details will be found in this week's "Answers."

FAINT THAT FAILED.

Missing Jewellery of Value Found Concealed in a Flower-Pot.

Found in a faint on the kitchen floor of a flat in Marylebone-street, Mrs. Woods, a charwoman, subsequently said a strange man had rushed in and knocked her down.

A valuable gold watch and chain and two rings were missing. Woods told her story at the Tottenham Court-road Station.

But a police-inspector called at the flat, became suspicious, and visited Woods at her house in Smith's-court. The watch was lying on her table; the rings and chain were in a flower-pot.

"What on earth made you do this?" asked Mr. Plowden, at Marlborough-street.

"I was in debt, sir."

She was remanded for one day.

£300 NOT "A FEW PENCE."

"I'm glad to do anything for a few pence," said James Cowley, of Stepney, to a constable, who saw him wheeling casks of spirit into a public-house.

At Clerkenwell Cowley was remanded yesterday, charged with stealing a horse and van and four casks of spirit, worth £300.

THE SEASIDE GIRL.

Are Daughters Allowed Too Much
Liberty on Their Holidays?

PLAYING AT LOVE.

The following are the latest letters from our post-bag on this interesting subject:—

GIRLS BLAMED TOO SEVERELY.

Mr. Graves seems to take a very extreme view of the matter. I think he is going too far when he says "the Summer Girl and boarding-house habitué are the cause of ruin to many a wife and children, as it is usually married men they lure from honour and duty."

I have visited several of the popular resorts, including Ramsgate, Hastings, Brighton, Margate, and Yarmouth, and I find in a majority of cases that the so-called "Summer Girl" does not go out of her way to attract men. It appears to me, therefore, that it would be more just if a little less of the blame were put on the girl's shoulders and a little more on the man's, as I think that the young men of to-day do three-quarters of the flirting that goes on at the seaside.

A YOUNG MAN.

PLAYING AT LOVE.

I cannot understand how any sensible, good-principled person can uphold flirting, even though it be only for a fortnight in the summer.

I abhor any girl or man who plays at love. (To flirt means to play at courtship, so surely to play at courtship must mean to play at love.)

Love should be sacred to us all. If two young people can become friends while on a holiday, very often much good comes from it. It is good for the two sexes to be friends, but it is bad to flirt.

I do think harm often comes through people talking and pointing at young couples who perhaps are but friends, and do not flirt.

F. L.

PARENTS IN FAULT.

I was particularly pleased to read "C. H. D.'s" letter. I quite agree that many girls take advantage of their holiday to break away from parental restraint, and to flirt with anybody they meet. But are they altogether to blame?

I would like to suggest that if parents were to allow their girls healthy intercourse with the opposite sex, the girls themselves would be less affected, and I think far less likely to behave in an unseemly way when staying at the seaside.

B. E.

FLIRTS UNFIT TO BE WIVES.

I, more to my shame I suppose, have travelled, seen, and had very good experience on the subject of "flirting."

I have flirted with at least sixty girls, and, believe me, in nine years I have met only two that I should care to make my wife or to see married to any man I cared about.

C. S.

INFLUENCE GIRLS MAY WIELD.

It is refreshing to know that such men as your correspondent "In Search of a Wife" are still to be met.

Oh, that girls would realise the power and meaning of "the silent force of influence" they each possess, which, if used in a true, womanly way, would result in the moulding of a nobler, better man.

AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL.

P.S.—May I add that your bright paper comes as a ray of sunshine in the home?

CHEERED BY REAPERS.

General Booth Greeted by the Wayside on His Great Home Motor-Car Pilgrimage.

Reapers hard at work in the fertile Kentish fields between Dover and Sittingbourne paused for a period yesterday to raise a lusty cheer.

It was their salutation to General Booth, who was on his great motor-car tour through the country—a pilgrimage that is arousing the keenest interest and admiration all through the land.

The General first travelled to Deal, where the mayor received him in state. Thence he went to Sandwich and on to Ramsgate. At both places he was most affectionately greeted. Both at Canterbury and Sittingbourne the veteran Salvation Army leader addressed meetings, and met with the most cordial reception.

"CRUEL" SPORTS.

"Daily Mirror" Readers Condemn Killing as an Amusement.

The leading article in the Daily Mirror, entitled "The Mote and the Beam," has brought in a great many letters, mostly in agreement with the position taken up that English people cannot justly condemn Spanish bull-fighting so long as they practise cruelties in connection with sport.

"Not a 'Sportsman,'" writing from Newton Flotman, Norwich, says:—

Your leading article is excellent. It hits the nail on the head. But there is one word in it to which I take exception.

Could not you have found a more appropriate term than "sportsman" for a man who takes a delight in chasing a defenceless animal to be torn by dogs?

What is more graceful and beautiful than a tame stag grazing in a park? Yet I have seen one of these beautiful creatures taken in a cart to a certain spot, there let loose, and after it has got a start chased over the country by men and dogs.

After a long chase I have seen the poor thing fly past me with its tongue lolling out, its eyes nearly starting from their sockets, and in every Pray let them look at home first and put matters right here. If they will only consider, they must see they are not so very much better than the Spaniards.

"G. P." (Carshalton) writes:—"Your article cannot fail to do good. The fiendish cruelty practised nowadays in various forms of so-called 'sport' is nothing short of a national disgrace."

Mr. Ernest Cartledge (Longton, Staffs.) says:—"A carter who is cruel to his horse is summoned and punished. Yet people who occupy the highest social positions in the land practise far greater cruelty when they leave the victims of their guns to die in agony. Is not this one law for the rich and another for the poor?"

DIFFICULTIES OF THE MONEY MARKET.

Stock Exchange Depressed by Tsar's Statement on Peace Terms.

CAPEL COURT, Wednesday Evening.—As the peace conference draws near there is a little hesitation. The rumoured utterances of the Tsar and M. de Witte about the terms which Russia is prepared to accept have a rather depressing influence.

We must also allow for one or two other adverse influences. They are the sugar difficulties in Paris, the course of the Paris settlement, and above all, the holiday spirit. Operators just leaving for a few days' holiday do not bother their heads about buying. So, also, with the public. Consequently the markets suffer.

Thus, Consols are lower. Consols are no better than 90½ for the account, but as a whole the gilt-edged market was not bad.

Some of the Home Railway traffics yesterday were startling. The North-Western showed a decrease of over £50,000. Fortunately these decreases meant little. They simply went against the long distance traffics over the August Bank holiday last year, and will be compensated for next week.

So the market took very little notice of them. The Scottish stocks wound up their half-year with good traffics. Any dullness noted in the Home Railway market is entirely due to the depression in Consols.

FOREIGN MARKET REACTION.

Naturally, with the Paris settlement and the sugar difficulties, and with the Tsar laying down the law about peace terms with Japan, the Foreign market was not in the happiest of moods. Most of the Paris favourites showed rather lower prices, and even the copper shares reacted slightly. But the insane gamble in some of the Central American securities continues in some measure, Costa Rica issues being hoisted to-day. Japanese and Russians were all dull.

Evidently the Hull loan has not gone very well. The lists have been kept open until the bitter end. It is the most salutary lesson to our corporations, as several of them were waiting to try to induce the public to give them too much credit. Hull ought to have been well content to ask less than "par" for its loan, and was singularly ill-advised in the state of the markets to make the offer on the terms suggested.

American Rails are kept on the see-saw. They put them down overnight in New York, and the wirepullers put them up again here. It really makes no difference to the public in this country, who are not in the least interested. The Canadian Railway group has not been so good, and here the reason is that there is a rumour of fresh Canadian Pacific capital, which rumour the market seemed to regard as well founded. As usual, the market estimates the Grand Trunk traffic liberally, expecting £7,000 up.

"BOOM" IN FOREIGN RAILS.

The Foreign Railway "boom" shows no sign of losing its popularity. The market is still a good one for several descriptions. Some of the Brazilian Rails seem to be in favour, for, of course, about mid-August there will be some big crop movements, and consequently the traffics should bulk very largely until the end of the year. Such considerations account for support of San Paulo, but they are talking of a splitting arrangement in connection with them, and they are at 202 in consequence. The Argentine traffics were very good, and like results were shown also by the Mexican Railways. Nitrate Rails were helped by a big traffic.

Now that the Docks amalgamation terms have been digested, the best proof perhaps that they are thought fair is that both the Millwall and the London and India Dock stocks are rather being offered.

They were beating the big drum in the Kaffir market yesterday. They have apparently burst it to-day. Any way, Kaffirs are not what they were.

ARE WIVES A HELP OR A HINDRANCE?

IT is Mr. John Burns's homely common sense, far more than any political genius he may possess, which has made him such a popular figure in public life.

He has a heart and is not afraid to show it. He says what he thinks and what experience has taught him. Therefore one single remark of his is generally worth a dozen windy commonplace of the type dear to the ordinary politician.

In a discussion upon the proposal that the London County Asylums should revise their rules against employing married doctors, Mr. Burns gave a very interesting little bit of autobiography.

Sir John McDougall (formerly chairman of the L.C.C.) had spoken against the proposal, whereupon Battersea's M.P. declared stoutly that "all the good there was in Sir John and what little good there was in himself was due to the fact that they were married."

Mr. Burns's reply to the question, "Is marriage a failure?" is an emphatic "No!" He is a conspicuous success in life. He began as a labourer. By hard work and self-denial he has made himself a force in the land. And he attributes it all to the fact that he has a good wife.

A good wife is the greatest treasure a man can find. "Far above rubies" is her worth. Her influence upon him is incalculable. Unfortunately, there is another side to the shield. The reverse of all these statements is equally true. A wife who is not a good wife is the worst hindrance a man can find.

We are often told in these days that the girls of the present are not so well fitted to make good wives as the girls of the past. If it be true, the cause lies in the falsity of the ideals which are aimed at by the young people (of both sexes) of to-day.

The girls of fifty years ago may not have been able to play the piano quite so well or to discuss the novels of the day so fluently, but they saw life more steadily and sanely than many of their twentieth-century grandchildren see it.

They saw that we are not here merely to chase pleasure, to pass the time. Life to them had a serious meaning. When they were told that the greatest happiness lay in leading natural, healthy, working lives and doing whatever duty lay before them, they believed it and acted upon it.

They were, in consequence, far happier and far more contented, they got far more out of life, than if they had spent their time reading unwholesome stories, smoking nasty, cheap cigarettes (no woman can tell the difference between good and bad tobacco), evading their responsibilities as wives and mothers, and thinking of nothing more interesting than the next new fashion in sleeves.

There are now a great many girls of this latter type to be found in all classes of the community. It is they who bring marriage into discredit. All husbands ought to be able to say, as Mr. John Burns says, that his wife has helped to bring out all his good qualities and to get rid of the bad ones. What percentage of them could give so handsome a testimonial?

In common fairness, let us ask the question, too, "How many wives are there who would say that their husbands had been a help and not a hindrance to them?" If marriage fails to develop the characters of husband and wife in pleasant and useful directions, whose fault is it? Most people would be inclined to say nowadays, "Generally the woman's." Yet fifty years ago the almost unanimous answer would have been, "The man's."

The pendulum of public opinion has swung with a vengeance. The change in the view which women take of marriage has a good deal to do with it. Lucky, indeed, then are those who can say with John Burns, "I owe everything to my wife."

A THOUGHT FOR TO-DAY.

The most certain sign of wisdom is a continual cheerfulness.—Montaigne.

THIS MORNING'S GOSSIP.

CAPTAIN and Mrs. Ronald Greville are not at Goodwood this week, but they are staying at the Priory, Reigate, until they go to Cowes. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught recently motored over from Bag-hot and spent the afternoon and dined with them, returning later in the evening. Reigate Priory is a very pretty place that belongs to Lady Henry Somerset, and she has let it for some years past to Captain Greville, who is likely to continue his tenancy for some little time longer.

Although Princess Victoria is considerably better than she was before she went on that long cruise in the spring, she has not joined the Duke of Richmond's party at Goodwood this week, but is staying quietly at home, and will be present at the christening of her little nephew at Sandringham to-day.

M. Albert Barrère, who has just been promoted to be an officer of the Legion of Honour, is as well known in England as in France. He is professor of French at the Military College, Woolwich, and, like the late Max O'Rell, has for years done all his family to get more food, the grandfather, as being the only grown man in it, volunteered to go on the search. He remained away one hour, two hours, five hours. Then his dead body was brought back. He had been killed in a street riot near one of the bread shops by a party of Communists.

Mr. Anthony Hope Hawkins, who presided at the old Marlburians' dinner last night, was very successful as a scholar, and won credit for his school by getting a scholarship at Balliol College, Oxford, when he left Marlborough. It looked at one time as though he were destined to become a humdrum lawyer, and he settled in the Temple with that aim before him after leaving Oxford. Fortunately for the public, however, he took to writing while waiting for briefs, and has continued doing so ever since.

Mr. Hope (one cannot help alluding to him under that more familiar name) is one of the English writers who are thoroughly appreciated in America. He is certain to be mercilessly lionised whenever he goes to New York. But indiscriminate flattery is often rather more amusing than gratifying.

Members of Parliament are paying an extraordinary compliment to Mr. H. W. Lucy in volunteering to compensate him for the loss of the case which Mr. Moy Thomas brought against him. The fact that the subscription list has been opened by the Prime Minister and the Speaker shows how great is "Toby's" popularity in the House. Nevertheless, an English jury having decided against him one may be excused for thinking that the matter might have rested there without members of the House taking the task of compensation, however informally, upon themselves.

The Earl of Albemarle, who has just had a misfortune with his yacht, the mast of which was lost during a race near Southampton, is one of the most complete sportsmen in England. He rides, shoots, hunts, and cycles, and is a member of the Sailing Committee of the Royal Yacht Squadron. He contributed a very scientific study of cycling to the Badminton Library. He is also a keen Volunteer, and served in South Africa as a colonel of the C.V.

Lady Albemarle has been yachting lately with her husband. She is a very popular woman with her own rather limited circle of friends, but seems rather to prefer home life to the wear and tear of smart society in London. She is the only child of Lord Egerton of Tatton, and her eldest son, Lord Bury, came of age nearly two years ago. In spite of that Lady Albemarle looks only old enough to be his sister. Quendenham Hall, Norfolk, Lord Albemarle's seat, really belongs, by the way, to Lady Albemarle. It was settled on her by her father a good many years ago.

Colonel Edward Tufnell, who is now well on the road to recovery from his recent serious illness, is one of the members for Essex, and an extremely wealthy man. He was for twenty-two years in the Army, and has seen service on more than one occasion. He was with Lord Wolseley in the Nile Expedition, some twenty years ago, and his regiment won the £100 prize which the General offered to the first which succeeded in getting up the river. Colonel Tufnell won the Nile medal in this campaign. His enthusiasm for riding was not extinguished by a serious fall from his horse which he suffered two years ago.

Let us hope that the news that Sir Henry Fletcher's house in Cumberland has just been damaged by fire does not mean that the conflagration epidemic, so severe at the beginning of the year, has broken out again. Sir Henry is very popular in the north. He is a capital shot, one of the leading lights at Blisley, and he frequently gets up shooting-parties at his country seat. He was once, by the way, a parliamentary groom-in-waiting to the Queen. His is an old family, and one of his ancestors entertained Mary, Queen of Scots, on a journey past his house three centuries ago.

A WOMAN OF THE MOMENT.

Miss Mary Anderson.

FROM time to time the public, which is supposed to have so short a memory for things theatrical, hears her name mentioned and remembers. The name of Mme. Navarro is no longer a disguise for her retirement, and when it was announced that she had become the happy mother of a girl a singularly sympathetic interest was felt by all who had ever seen her.

What sort of an actress is it that we remember, every now and again, so vividly? One who was almost ideally beautiful, to begin with—tall, a daughter "of the gods, classically formed and featured."

From her very first appearance, as a girl of sixteen, her beauty lifted her above the ordinary crowd of strivers for success on the stage. As experience came she added talent to beauty—a gift of pathos, an appealing voice and graceful movements.

That the combination was irresistible will be evident if we recall the story of that appearance of hers in Mr. Gilbert's play, "Pygmalion and Galatea."

As Galatea, in her Grecian robes, Miss Anderson turned with outstretched arms towards the audience. "She was supposed to be appealing to heaven. 'The gods will help me!' she cried. At once, with one accord, the 'gods' of the gallery roared response, 'We will!'"

Such spontaneous expressions of sympathy must remain with Mme. Navarro and remind her pleasantly of the Mary Anderson that was.

IN MY GARDEN.

AUGUST 2.—The very word "lavender" has a sweet sound. To-day the lavender bushes are covered with bloom, and before long the fragrant spikes will be ready to be gathered for keeping.

The first gladioli open. These flowers are, without a doubt, the finest subjects for garden decoration in August. Few plants have been more improved than the gladioli. Who does not love their stately habit and regal beauty?

If good bulbs are planted, magnificent spikes of bloom can be obtained in endless shades of red, salmon, pink, and white. They are also very good for cutting, few flowers lasting longer in water.

E. F. T.

A REHEARSAL IN MANNERS.

The thoughts of politicians are at present full of the approaching visit of the French Admirals to England. Our artist pictures Mr. Balfour, Sir M. Campbell-Bannerman, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. John Burns, Mr. Alfred Lyttelton, Mr. Winston Churchill, Mr. John Redmond, and Mr. Swift MacNeill in active preparation for a suitably Gallic reception of them.

in his power to make the English and the French understand one another. M. Barrère was, I believe, rather bitten with the craze for the regeneration of society in earlier days, and he was, fortunately for him, in Paris when, after the war of 1870, the Commune tried to establish itself as the Government of France.

A friend of M. Barrère, who met him during those terrible days in Paris, says that he seemed delighted with the situation. They met one day on the quays, and the friend was invited to join the Fédérés, as the Communists called themselves. "We are having grand fun," said M. Barrère. "Come and join us, and you'll be a captain in a week." The friend joined, was made a captain, and played at soldiers with sculptors, artists, and students from the Latin Quarter until the brief day of the Commune was over.

It was indeed most amusing, no doubt, to play with fire, but many who did so got burnt. He was less amusing, besides, for those who did not approve of the Commune, and its aims. A French friend once told me that during the Siege of Paris he had been long half-starved in the cellar of his house. "Those were subterranean days, and he, like everybody else, had withdrawn into the earth to escape the Prussian bombs. He was only a little boy at the time, and when it became necessary for Once, not very long ago, an American lady rushed up to him at a party and said: "Oh, Mr. Hawkins, I must thank you. My children have been brought up on the 'Dolly Dialogues.'" She evidently imagined that those witty society satires were literary fare for babes.

That mistaken compliment reminds one of the experience of Sir Henry Howorth, which he has sometimes wittily told at public dinners. He took a young lady down to dinner on a certain occasion, and she opened the conversation by an enthusiastic appeal for help. "My little dog is so ill," she said. "What can be done for it?" "But, my dear young lady, I know nothing about dogs." "Why I thought you had written a 'History of Mongrels.'" Sir Henry, as the learned know, is the author of a monumental work on the Mongols. Such is the reward of learning.

Mme. Melba is at the present time staying at Blounts, her place down the river, and will be there for some time. She is to take part in the Worcester Festival this year, and will be the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort at Badminton, who have a party for the festival and intend taking their guests by special train. Mme. Melba was delighted with the success of her matinée for Mlle. Bauermeister, as nearly £2,000 was raised by the performance.

GLORIOUS GOODWOOD PHOTOGRAPHED

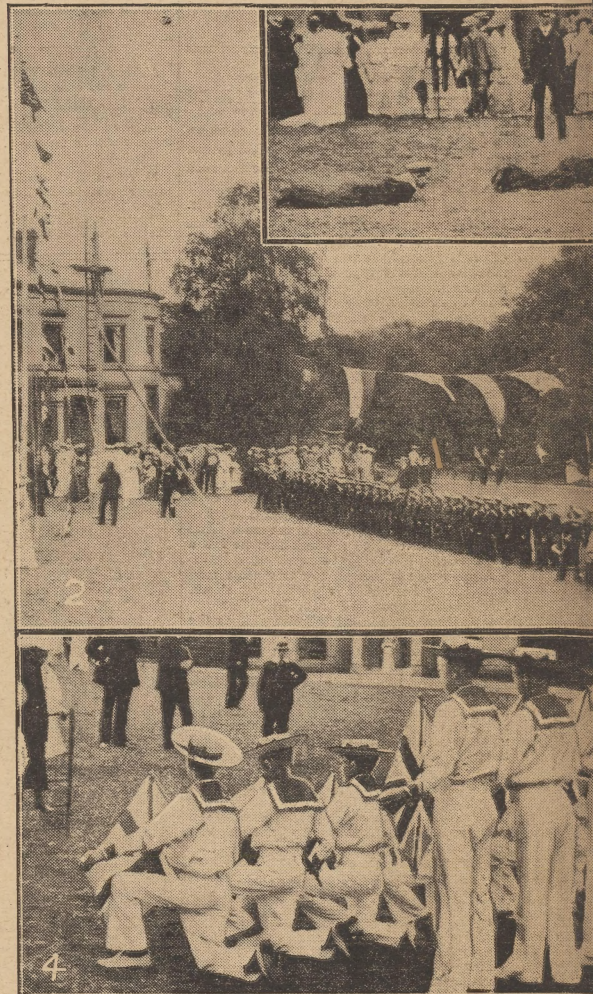

King Edward snapshotted on the course at Goodwood yesterday. The King, whose position in the photograph is indicated by a cross, was observed to be in great spirits, and is evidently enjoying his brief respite from the cares and ceremonies of State. His Majesty has always been a keen sportsman, and he watched the racing with close interest.

SNAPSHOTS OF THE CHANNEL MERMAID.

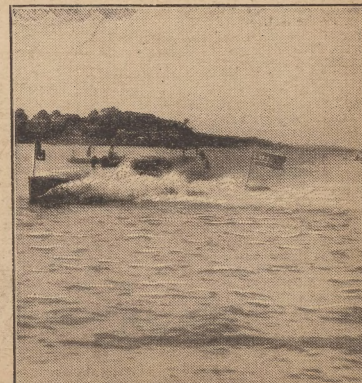

Miss Annette Kellerman, who is making an aquatic tour round the South-Eastern coast, photographed during her swim from Ramsgate to Margate yesterday. It may be gathered from the larger photograph that Miss Kellerman enjoyed her swim, and the smaller one shows how easily she is able to take a meal while in the water.

Yesterday Miss Kellerman continued her aquatic tour by swimming to Margate.

ONE FALSE STEP.

rearranging fruit in a basket for no very apparent reason, paid him any attention.

"Queenie!"

She turned, almost reluctantly. "Tom believes that I borrowed the money to pay back Dexter. As you hadn't told him the real facts of the case, I didn't deceive him. He has given these notes to me, but they are yours."

He hesitated for a moment. "Will you answer me one question?" he said quietly. "I shall not be seeing you again for some time, and—and I shall have no peace of mind if I part from you with this question unanswered. You did not answer it the other day. When you have paid back the money borrowed from Mr. Mordant, will you be free from all further obligation?"

"No," she answered.

"What do you mean?"

"I shall always owe him a great debt of gratitude. He has proved himself a great friend."

But Chester could not conceive the change brought about by her influence. His forehead puckered.

"I cannot believe a man of his calibre acting without ulterior motive, little girl. When I realised that you had borrowed from him I was filled with a horror lest some bargain had been struck, that this man was trying to buy your affections. Tell me—truthfully, there has been nothing of this kind?"

She hesitated for a moment.

"Not now," she said with a frank simplicity.

IN PREPARATION.

A New Serial Story

TO BE COMPLETED IN A LIMITED NUMBER OF INSTALMENTS

WILL COMMENCE SHORTLY

"He tried to, at first. He wanted to marry me, but I—" she laughed rather strainedly—"I managed to point out to him the folly of his ways, and so he became my friend instead, and, as a friend, lent me the money, to pay off Tom's debts. Now I have told you all, Frank. There is nothing left to worry you."

"No," he said unsteadily, and with a curious sigh. Then, suddenly and clumsily, "I couldn't bear the thought—it's too horrible—of you marrying a man like that."

"I don't know that it would be exactly horrible," she said with a little laugh. "It would!" he answered fiercely. "You are too good, too pure to be mentioned in the same breath with that man."

"You don't quite understand—you're not quite just to Mr. Mordant. He deserves to be considered in a better light."

She turned away, and again busied herself with flowers and fruit.

"You must not miss your train," she said quickly.

The tick of the clock seemed to become suddenly and painfully distinct to both. The man tried to say something, but the words failed to pass his lips. It stood to reason that after this day their relations must alter. It was only according to the nature of things. Therefore, it was something much more than a commonplace "au revoir" that confronted them, rather "adieu," a bidding farewell to a condition of things that would be impossible in the future.

"Little girl, I—I suppose I ought to think about going."

The commonplace is frequently the refuge of deep emotions.

"Yes. I—I should never forgive myself if I were the cause of your missing your train."

Another commonplace.

"And we have so much to be thankful for," added the girl inconsequently. "It is all so much brighter and happier now. We have shared much misery; but it is all behind us—like a black patch of clouds that has passed overhead, and is being driven further and further away. And I wish you and your future wife all the happiness and joy in the world. I shall be thinking of you both often—very often—during the weeks to come. And dear old Tom's thoughts will be with you, too."

She glanced at the clock.

"But you will miss your train."

"I can't go like this," said Chester brokenly.

"You will have to take a cab. I'll send Banks for one."

And she rang the bell and told Banks, who was prompt to answer, to summon a cab with all possible speed. A moment later a whistle was screaming out vibrantly, then the clatter of cabs in fierce competition.

"Queenie, I can't leave you like this. I wish to God I had known myself better in the past—"

"Don't—don't talk like that, please!" she cried, with a heartache in her voice. "You must go—you must go."

He snatched her hands and pressed them to his lips.

"Good-bye. God bless you."

Then he was gone.

Only the tick of the clock and the throb of a woman's breaking heart. Then the rattle of wheels and the clatter of horse's hoofs.

When these sounds died away the stillness of the room was for some time only broken by a woman's suppressed sobs. Those words, "I wish to God I had known myself better in the past," had been infinitely better left unsaid; but they had surged up from the heart, and were past the barriers of the lips before the man could check them.

They intensified the irony of the situation, and added a hundredfold to the woman's suffering.

Regret and poignant remorse kept Chester company in the cab as he drove to his hotel to pick up his bag. Whatever his feelings, it had been utterly wrong to give them utterance. But some voice, over which he had no control, seemed to have spoken in spite of himself. He accused himself now of treachery to Eve, to Queenie, and to himself, even though he had revealed a truth.

Revelation had come to him within a week of his marriage. He had made a mistake. He had been swept away by passion and blinded by the personal

A PROUD MOTHER

Hints and Facts for Mothers on Rearing Strong, Healthy, and Beautiful Children.

What food shall I give baby? Which food will suit him best? Which will make him strongest, most healthy, and most vigorous? It is clear that a food which is largely used by Doctors in their own families and that is also used in many Royal Nurseries must be thoroughly satisfactory, and satisfy every need of infant life. As "Savory and Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" is being used in many Royal Nurseries, and as in such cases the very best medical advice is available, no stronger guarantee of its excellence can be required or given.

A FOOD THAT IS EASY TO DIGEST.

Everyone knows that the digestive organs of a baby are exceedingly delicate, and that very great care must be taken to avoid upsetting the digestion in any way. Every mother knows that if too much work is thrown on the digestive organs baby will become miserable, and will fail to thrive properly, look healthy, or make proper progress. That is why so many children do not get on well; they are unable to digest the food given to them. The beauty of "Savory and Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" is that not only is it easily digested, but that it exercises at the same time the digestive organs, so that they are gradually developed, strengthened, and made ready for the needs of later life.

GIVE YOUR BABY THE RIGHT FOOD.

The body is often called the "House of Life," and the way it is built up is very wonderful. Whence do the bones, brain, muscles, teeth, and nerves derive the material which enters into their composition? They obtain this from the food taken, and that is why in infant life more particularly it is so important that the food given should contain the necessary body-building elements. Stunted, ill-nourished, and badly developed bodies are not always due to insufficiency of food, but are in many cases due to the fact that the food given has been wanting in some necessary element. If you give your baby "Savory and Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" you can be quite sure that you are giving the right food to make him strong, healthy, and vigorous.

THE VERY BEST FOOD FOR BABY.

"Savory and Moore's Best Food" contains everything needed to build up bone, brain, teeth, nerves, and muscles, and infants fed upon it form firm flesh, have rosy cheeks, increase properly in weight, cut their teeth well, gain muscular strength day by day, and are remarkably free from rickets or scurvy. "Savory and Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" is manufactured on the firm's own premises, where they have been established for more than a hundred years, and every process is carried out under the personal direction of members of the firm. You cannot have a better proof that everything is done that possibly can be done to ensure the food being perfectly pure and thoroughly well prepared.

BODY BUILDING FOR INVALIDS.

"Savory and Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" is of the greatest value to convalescents, the aged, and all whose digestion is weak. It is eaten, enjoyed, and digested easily, and has the further advantage that it can be prepared in a large number of pleasant and appealing ways, and that its nutritive value is not impaired or its digestibility decreased thereby.

"Savory and Moore's Best Food for Infants and Invalids" is supplied by all Chemists and Stores in tins at 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s., or a large trial tin will be sent for 6d. with a leaflet enclosed telling you how to prepare it for invalids. A booklet will also be sent which is a "Guide to Infant Feeding," and contains various tables, showing the correct height of infants at different ages, weight, muscular development, the age at which the various teeth should be cut, how infants should be fed, and a large amount of other useful information that every mother ought to possess.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO TRY IT?

Our booklet will be sent on receipt of postcard, or, what is much better, it will be forwarded with Large Trial Tin for Six Penny Stamps if you mention the Daily Mirror, and address your letter to Savory and Moore, Limited, Chemists to the King, 143, New Bond-street, London, W. REFORMS IN DIET OUR AMERICAN COUSINS HAVE TAUGHT US.

WHAT WE EAT, DRINK, AND AVOID.

BY ONE WHO HAS PROFITED BY LESSONS RECEIVED.

Since the Americanisation of a certain portion of London society we have made, among other new departures, a very decided change in our menus. In a word, we turn to New York for our inspirations, and not to Paris, and as the departure owes something also to the health craze, and serves as an antidote to latter-day luxuriousness, it is upheld by the wisecracks, the followers of plain living and high thinking, and the medical men.

Not Nearly So Much Meat.

Meat no longer holds pride of place. We begin our dinners, probably with shaddock—that fruit which is said to have tempted Eve—served with a little diluted sherry, and follow it with clear, cold soup, an entrée of omelets or chicken, which in turn is succeeded by a joint, much disguised and served with iced cucumber, and perhaps a salad of fruits and cold vegetables, sprinkled over with grated nuts. After the next, a “bird” course, a compôte of raspberries may follow, served with orange sauce frappé. Then a savoury, and fruits again.

Here is the menu of a smart luncheon lately given in New York:—

Strawberries in Little Pots.
Iced Bouillon with Brown Bread and Butter Strips.
Cold Fillet of Fish with Sauce Tartare and Cucumber.
Egg Terrapin in Green Peppers.
Jellied Chicken with Mushrooms, Asparagus, and Peas.
Tomato Roses with Frozen Cream and Wafers.
Couscous Orientale. Angel's Food.
Coffee.

Another menu for the recent little dinner of a New York hostess is the following:—

Cassopis of Anchovy with Chopped Parsley.
Oysters with Horse-Radish and Celery.
Radishes, Salted Nuts, Olives.
Fillets of Fish. Potato Balls.
Leg of Lamb with Mint Jelly. Asparagus.
Lemon Sherbet. Crème de Meathe Cherries.
Slices of Capon Breast with Dressed Lettuce.
Melon Mould of Pistachio Cream filled with Vanilla Mousse.
Toasted Wafers, Cheese, and Coffee.

These two slender menus will surely recall to my readers a luncheon here or dinner there of which they have partaken at their own or their friends' houses during the past season. Truly we are learning the lessons our American friends are teaching us and are becoming apt pupils in the art of menu-making.

FASHIONS IN PERFUMES.

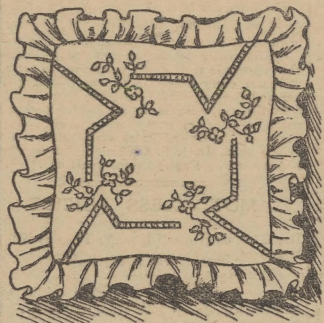

HOW TO SCENT RAIMENT CORRECTLY.

The smart woman chooses the perfume she most likes and adheres to it. It must be sweet and pleasant, never too heavy, and always present. Some women like the odour of attar of roses, but to prevent it from being too oppressive it should be mixed with alcohol. Take an ounce of pure alcohol to one drop of attar of roses, and allow it to stand for a little while. It is then ready to sprinkle over handkerchiefs and clothes.

To scent a pile of handkerchiefs with attar of roses, open the tight wooden box in which they should be kept and sprinkle the perfume upon the top handkerchief, really saturating it; then turn the pile over so that the saturated handkerchief is below. By this means the scent will rise and make the entire pile daintily scented.

A drawer may thus be perfumed with attar of roses. Take a wide-mouthed bottle and fill it with absorbent cotton. Now take three drops of attar of roses and half a dozen drops of glycerine, and, mixing them well together, pour the result on the absorbent cotton. Lay the bottle upon its side in the drawer, and the odour will penetrate the whole receptacle.

To scent a wardrobe with attar of roses is a more difficult task. Take great sheets of cotton-wool, split them, and sprinkle them with a mixture of glycerine, rosewater, and attar of roses. Of course, a very few drops of the latter must be used, for attar of roses is expensive, especially if it be of the pure Oriental kind. Now tack the sheets of wadding together and suspend them against the back of the wardrobe, securing them in place with thumb tacks. Over this stretch a thin layer of pink china silk, and the scent will not be very long in reaching the surface, and be found very sweet and quite sufficient.

It is the fashion during the summer months to scent the whole house with large jars filled with potpourri. Now and then the tops of the jars should be taken off, and the odour of the perfume will penetrate everywhere.

Perfuming jewellery is the latest idea, and necklaces, rings, watches, chains, and other ornaments are laid in boxes of scented wood, in which there are scattered small sachet bags. When the jewels are taken out a delicate aroma will envelop them. Scented veils are also very popular. They are perfumed mostly with bergamot, orris, or clover, and distribute a most refreshing scent. The plan of scenting the flowers in a hat is a pleasant one, though it is expensive, as it is almost impossible to make the odour permanent.

All oily perfumes are mixed with glycerine to make them last longer, and the usual way is to saturate absorbent cotton-wool with the scent and hang the wet balls in the wardrobe. They are very oily, and, therefore, great care must be taken that they do not touch any of the clothes in the cupboard.

FLOWER VASES CLEANED.

Vinegar and rock salt will remove stains from the inside of flower vases. Dissolve a tablespoonful of salt in a gill of vinegar and rub the vase with this, or pour it into it and shake it till the stains disappear. Then rinse the vase in clean water and the stain will be removed.

WHEN MAKING CUSTARDS.

To prevent a custard from becoming watery in tarts when it is cooked, boil the milk before mixing it with the eggs or egg-powder. It will not matter if the milk becomes cold, but it should not get cold before it is mixed with the egg.

ONE FALSE STEP.

spell of one woman, and had suddenly awakened to find himself face to face with this truth.

But he had made his bed, and he must lie on it. Perhaps when he returned to Eve and again came under the spell of her personal magnetism he would shake off this new-born love. It might be that he did not yet know himself.

The problem that Fate had chalked up on the blackboard was still unsolved.

Chester was staring straight before him, utterly regretful and remorseful, when a great motor-car, dust-stained from a long tour, buzzed past his cab at a rapid pace.

He recognised Hesper Mordaunt, and answered almost as quickly as he asked himself the question: What had brought him to Liverpool?

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Queenie was just preparing to leave for the hospital when Banks announced Mr. Mordaunt. He displayed some embarrassment when he was ushered into the room. His senses seemed to have grown active, for he was quick to read signs of distress on Queenie's pale face, bravely though she endeavoured to conceal them under a friendly smile of welcome.

KRUSCHEN MINERAL WATERS for relieving Gout, Rheumatism, Ezema, Liver and Kidney diseases. Kruschen Balls are produced by the evaporation of the celebrated springs. Half a teaspoonful daily is a certain cure. Send P.O. 10. 1s. to E. G. Hughes, Chemist, 17, Deansgate, Manchester. (ADVT)

"How's your brother?" he questioned sharply. "Things are slack just now, so I thought I'd run down to see how he was getting on; and—er—make an apology."

"An apology?" "Yes," he stammered, the dark blood mounting to his cheeks. "I—you remember I made a reference some time ago to the disappearance of some petty cash from the office at the time your brother left. I could bite my tongue off for those words now. I've just found the real culprit. I'm sorry, Kiddie—pon my soul, I'm sorry."

He had quitted unconsciously lapsed into "Kiddie."

"Say you forgive me. I don't make any bones about it. I did believe he took it, but it was a blackguardly thing for me to have thrown it in your teeth, Kiddie, even if it had been true. But I was a different fellow then—you hadn't taken me in hand."

He was clumsily and genuinely apologetic, and watched her expression with a nervous, almost sheepish look in his eyes.

"Yes, Mr. Mordaunt, you are forgiven. I saw the letter you wrote my brother. I am going to see him now. Would you care to come with me?"

"Yes; but—"

He fumbled with his great gauntlet gloves nervously.

But—

Queenie interrupted him quickly.

"I have something to give you. I can now pay you back the money you lent me so generously."

"What? No, I won't touch it! What have you been doing—borrowing? What do you take me for?"

"But I am in a position to pay you back, and I insist. But I still remain grateful, Mr. Mordaunt." "Can't you trust me?" he cried roughly. "I thought that was all changed now. You're hurting me! I know what you think—so long as you're in my debt, there's a chance that I shall try to strike a bargain with you as I once tried. Don't you see that I've changed since then—that you have been making another man of me?"

The coarse, strong face was working with emotion. Hesper Mordaunt, credited in the business world with the skin of a rhinoceros, had become sensitive.

"Kiddie, you are forcing me to show my hand. But for this, I should have kept up as best I could this game of friendship, because of my fear of losing you, turning you against me, before I had a chance of winning your love fairly and squarely."

ONE MILLION SHILLINGS FUND.

URGENT.
The Friends of Dr. BARNABDO'S HOMES will be interested to learn the result of the recent Appeal for £120,000 on behalf of these National and Christian Institutions. Up to the present date the total responses received have amounted to £25,000. But we regret to say that since the 20th July there have been but few responses received, and it is evident that the effect of the Appeal is dying down. The Council of the Association, however, feel the paramount importance of obtaining further help PROMPTLY, and believing that there are multitudes of people all over the country interested in this Christian and National work on behalf of Waifs and Orphan Children who have never helped it because they imagine the Small Gifts are not acceptable, have now inaugurated a

ONE MILLION SHILLINGS FUND.

They earnestly ask the readers of the DAILY MIRROR to co-operate in making this a success. Everyone can spare One shilling or Two shillings, and many can spare Five shillings or even Ten shillings for this marvellously successful work among our Waifs and Strays.

All we ask is that each person who reads this announcement will endeavour to give at least ONE SHILLING, but we hope some readers may be able also to COLLECT A FEW SHILLINGS.

A Special Card for collecting SHILLINGS will be sent to anyone who will write to Mr. George Code, the Honorary Secretary, at the address given below. These Cards should be returned by 31st August, when the list of the MISSIONARY SHILLINGS FUND will have been successful, and that we have thereby added £50,000 to the Founder's Day Fund. Already the following Gifts or Promises have been received:—

"Gratitude to God" promises 1000 shillings
The Lord Mayor of London 211
Mr. J. Barendse promises 100
The Little Marquis of Donegal has sent 20

While Mr. Howard Williams (the late Chairman of the Council) generously promises to give the last 10,000

Many of the Boys and Girls of the Homes who have heard of the Fund are already eagerly sending in their gifts of ONE or MORE SHILLINGS.

It was to further the MISSIONARY SHILLINGS FUND that Her Majesty QUEEN ALEXANDRA sent the following telegram, which was read at the Meeting at the Mansion House, presided over by the Lord Mayor of London, on 10th July:

"The Queen sends you success in your endeavour and God-speed in your good work."

Our Council believe that many of the kind friends who have already generously contributed to the Founder's Day Fund will be willing even further to assist by INVITING THEIR FRIENDS TO GIVE ONE SHILLING each.

We therefore have many a large and immediate application to the address given below for the SPECIAL COLLECTING CARDS FOR THE ONE MILLION SHILLINGS FUND WHICH ARE NOW READY.

How You may be Taller

A Rational and Scientific Method of Increasing Height from 1 to 24 inches, with added Strength, Health, and Bodily Beauty, by the New "Cleave-Extensor" Method, the invention of Mr. F. Meredith Cleave, Ph.D., late Director of Exercises to Haileybury College, and the outcome of 17 years' continual study of the Physical Side of Life.

The "Cleave-Extensor" Method is the Rapid Culture of Physical Body with increased height by Mental and Natural Means. It is an original system of bodily movements which, adapted to individual needs, will, in the course of a few weeks, improve the personal appearance of a man or a woman 100 per cent, with the satisfaction of knowing that it is real and natural, and not artificial and unnatural (as fashion plate).

Mr. Cleave's system will give to ladies a beauty of figure and grace of carriage unobtainable by other methods, and the same result can be assured for awkward and ungainly men. Mr. Cleave's method—the "Cleave-Extensor" method—is the result of many years' of continuous study of the human frame, and constitutes an absolutely new departure in the science of improving the body by physical education. It has no connection or similarity whatsoever with any other form of bodily exercise, whether it be for health or increasing height, that is being advertised.

FREE TWO WEEKS' PERSONAL INSTRUCTION AND EXPLANATORY BOOK.

In order that serious enquirers can sufficiently judge the merits of this method, please cut out the attached form off page, and indicate by a mark thus X your physical requirements, and a set of selected movements prepared for you by Mr. Cleave will be sent in course of a day or two. Each movement is a photographic illustration (covering a period of two weeks) that can be readily followed and understood by a child. Mr. Cleave makes this offer in order to have his unique methods widely known, and will at the same time enclose an interesting 24-page booklet fully illustrated entitled "Why you are not Taller." All correspondence is strictly confidential.

A TIME KEEPER

"VI-COCOA AS A SUSTAINING POWER HAS NO EQUAL."

MR. F. SANDS, 55, Lombard-street, Birmingham, writes:—

"I am pleased to say that I have been using Vi-Cocoa for a long time now. Having to go out early in the morning to work as time-keeper in one of the largest Brass Works in the Midlands, I consider, it excellent and it claims to be. In my candid opinion, it has no equal for sustaining powers, and has done me a great deal of good."
